General

- Kraats Kaas' main priorities are food safety, safety and health in combination with business continuity. At the moment, we don't foresee any direct problems with regard to the advance of coronavirus.
- In general, food is not considered a possible carrier of the virus. Besides, Kraats Kaas and all her suppliers demonstrably apply the HACCP principles.
- Kraats Kaas has formed a mission-oriented team which monitors closely the developments that might affect the employees, and availability of the products.
- Temporary employment services apply measures that connect to the measures of Kraats Kaas.

Health en hygiene

- Kraats Kaas follows the directives of the RIVM, the Dutch National Institute for Health and Environment. She has given her staff and visitors the necessary instructions concerning hand hygiene and coughing/sneezing.
- The staff has been informed about the importance of personal hygiene, including the necessity of washing hands more than once. Shaking hands is not allowed. The cleaning staff has taken extra hygiene measures and has increased the frequencies on places with a lot of activity and traffic.

Traveling

- A general travel restriction has been set, and there is a travel ban for business trips to infected regions abroad.
- Travelling between the different sites is minimized.
- Visiting or receiving customers/business relations are also kept to a minimum.

Drivers

- There is a special protocol for drivers (both inbound and outbound). Everything is aimed at minimizing personal contact with employees.
- Special rules have been drawn up how to deal with freight documents.

Access

- Employees, temporary agency workers and external staff who have health problems related to coronavirus will have no access to the company. If in doubt, the management or HR will be contacted.

Focus on production

- Employees of supporting departments, including the office departments, are deployed to assist in the primary process.
- All employees should be flexible in both task/activities and in time to allow the primary process to take place.

Continuity

- Within Kraats Kaas organizational and ICT preparations have been made to enable, where possible, employees at critical functions to work from home, and to optimally support the process. Working from home is encouraged.
